The photo challenge, for your MC

four minutes, and half the work is done

BEFORE THE WEDDING

- Print page 1 on A4 paper, on paper of at least 160 gsm (about 60 lb), and cut along the lines: four cards of about 10 × 14 cm (4 × 5.5 in).
- Each card has eight different challenges. Mix the cards from table to table, and put two or three at the bar and by the entrance.
- Pick who will announce it: the best man, a bridesmaid, or your MC. Two to five minutes is plenty.

ON THE MIC, IN THIRTY SECONDS

“Ladies and gentlemen, a little mission for every table: a card of photo challenges. No need to do them all: pick two or three, and save your best shots for the dance floor. Have fun!”

If you're shooting with Film 36, add: “You each have thirty-six shots and no preview: shoot, then put your phone away. See you tomorrow at 10 AM to find out what you got.”

DURING THE EVENING

- Start at cocktail hour or at the beginning of dinner. Skip the ceremony, the entrance and the speeches, and if your ceremony is unplugged, keep every card out of sight until it's over.
- Remind everyone the challenge is a reason to look up, not a reason to film: shoot, then pocket your phone.
- One rule only: ask before photographing someone you don't know. And tell your photographer in advance.

THE NEXT DAY

- At brunch, everyone shows their best shot and the table votes. A photo isn't tied to a challenge: the game is played when you look at them together.
- With Film 36, every photo develops at once at 10 AM, and each guest gets their own.
